

The Casapulla Story

Luigi Casapulla was an Italian immigrant with great vision and an even greater work ethic. Luigi and his wife Anna (Zampini) had nine children. In 1956, Luigi bought a small neighborhood grocery store in Elsmere, DE. Since Luigi was already working two jobs, he had his children help him at the store. About that same time, chain grocery stores were coming to Delaware and Luigi knew he would have to do something to compete. It was then he added subs and steaks. Through the years, all nine of their children and all twelve of their grandchildren have worked in the business. In fact, fifty years later three of their children, (Andrew, Louie & Jeanne) and seven of their grandchildren are still carrying on the proud tradition. Sadly, Anna died in 1957 and never saw the success of the business.

In 1980, Luigi opened his second location in Hockessin DE. Again he had the help of his children and grandchildren. He could be found there every day until his death in 1985. In 1984, Paula LaPenta (Luigi's granddaughter) and her husband Michael, brought the tradition to the southern part of Delaware and opened Casapulla's South. In 1989, Joseph (Luigi's grandson) opened Casapulla's at People's Plaza, Glasgow, DE and in 1992, David (another grandson) opened Casapulla's North on Rt. 202 Wilmington, DE.

In June of 1999, the Hockessin property was sold. Although this was a very hard decision, it has allowed Rose, Phil, Joe and Betty (Luigi's children) to join their sisters, Vee and Marion in a much deserved retirement.

In November of 2005, Drew (Luigi's grandson) Re-Opened Casapulla's Hockessin at 1216 Old Incaster Pike (The old Hanks Country Store). And in 2006, Ann (Luigi's granddaughter) opened Red Mill Square. Also, Joseph (Luigi's grandson) has opened his second location in Middletown, DE in June of 2007! Unfortunately, the Hockessin store closed in July of 2012 and will be relocated to Smyrna and will open in November of 2012.
